Down to the wire, down and out

Third straight loss for Green and White. Paul McCallum hits last-second field goal as Lions defeat Roughriders 24-22

Thomas DeMarco threw for two touchdowns in his first pro start and Paul McCallum hit a 42-yard field goal with no time on the clock as the BC Lions moved into second place in the CFL's West Division with a 24-22 win Sunday over the Saskatchewan Roughriders.

B.C. (8-4) won its second straight while Saskatchewan (8-4) lost its third in a row.

Darian Durant threw a touchdown to Weston Dressler with 38 seconds to play as the Roughriders appeared poised to overcome two costly fumbles and snap a two-game losing streak.

But Marco Iannuzzi returned the kickoff 28 yards and DeMarco passed for a pair of key first downs to set up McCallum's winning kick.

Just seconds earlier, Dressler had scored on a corner route that sent the 39,373 in attendance into a frenzy.

With the Roughriders facing third-and-15 on their own side of half inside the final minute, Durant threw a 14-yard pass to Rob Bagg.

But Lions defender Chris Wilson took a roughing-the-passer penalty to negate the turnover and give the Riders a fresh set of downs at the B.C. 40-yard line.

Durant then threw a 32-yard pass to Taj Smith to set up what appeared to be the winning score. But for the third straight game, the Roughriders ultimately paid the price for their turnovers and undisciplined ways.

Durant fumbled on the game's second play from scrimmage, giving B.C. the ball at the Riders' 46-yard line.

DeMarco, starting in place of the injured Travis Lulay, completed five straight passes and B.C. got on the board first with a 12-yard field goal from McCallum.

The Riders took their first lead of the game when Durant hit Chris Garrett — who started in place of injured running back Kory Sheets — with a 37-yard pass to the front corner of the end zone with two seconds to play in the half.

Riders slotback Geroy Simon played his former team for the first time after 12 seasons in B.C. and tied Ben Cahoon's all-time receptions mark in the fourth quarter.

Moose Jaw

Roof caves in on courthouse

The Moose Jaw courthouse has sustained more than $1 million in damage after a section of its roof collapsed Saturday morning.

Moose Jaw police responded to an alarm at the courthouse and discovered that the roof had collapsed — causing what they called "substantial damage."

No one was inside the building, which is more than a century old. City police said the cause of the collapse is unclear.

While some initial media reports claimed it was a suspended ceiling that collapsed, Moose Jaw police clarified on Sunday that wasn't the case.

"The decking part of the roof (the very top section) didn't fall in, but everything underneath it fell down," Sgt. Terry Phillips told Metro.

Describing the collapse as a "major event," Phillips noted that the roof's support beams had fallen, as well as some strips of lumber and other pieces of building material."You can't look up and see daylight through it," he said of the current state of the building's roof.

"(But) it's more than the suspended ceiling that fell in."

The building is a provincial heritage property that was constructed in 1909.

Structural engineers are scheduled to carry out an assessment of the building on Monday morning.

As of Sunday afternoon, police had continued to cordon off the courthouse building.

Children in care need oversight: Advocates

National strategy.
B.C.'s representative for children says more monitoring needed for children moved across provinces

In a home in Fort Qu'Appelle, Sask., just east of Regina, a little girl was confined to a windowless, dark basement room with just a small blanket.

She was denied the use of a toilet and was rarely bathed or fed.

The toddler, who was born in British Columbia, was supposed to be cared for by her maternal grandfather, who had been given custody after the child was taken from her drug-addicted mother. Instead, children's advocates say the girl was lost in a child-welfare system that failed her.

Mary Ellen Turpel-Lafond, B.C.'s Representative for Children and Youth, says there is not enough oversight of children in care who move between provinces.

"We have inter-provincial regulation of eggs, chickens, cars, tractors and so forth, but we don't seem to have anything going with respect to children to the level of concern that we should have," Turpel-Lafond said in an interview with The Canadian Press.

For example, Turpel-Lafond said, no province could even give her the number of children received from or sent to other jurisdictions, or say if there was follow-up on the kids once they moved.

An inter-provincial protocol has existed since 2001, but Quebec never signed it.

"It's more of a protocol about who has to foot the bill," said Turpel-Lafond.

"There's a protocol; nobody understands it, nobody follows it, nobody tracks the numbers in and out of provinces across Canada."

Cheryl Milne, chairwoman of the Canadian Coalition for the Rights of Children, said because movement between provinces is not that frequent, it's not necessarily the top priority on each province's radar.

Part of the problem is that standards, such as the method of monitoring, are different for each province.

"What we are seeing in these rare, but tragic cases is that that's where the gaps are discovered and they're discovered when a child is badly mistreated or dies," said Milne.

SEWAGE REFERENDUM

Vote NO
to paying more.

Is this privatization? NO

The City will ALWAYS own and control the sewage treatment plant. ONLY City Council will set utility rates.

Is there a secret deal? NO

The City has only held back information that would interfere with getting the best contract with the bidders on the project, or would give one bidder an advantage. This has nothing to do with a P3 process – this is standard practice. Full details of the final contract will be made public.

Will a P3 cost more? NO

The P3 is a fixed price contract. The contractor will pay if the project is late, or for any cost overruns, NOT the taxpayer.

Vote NO to losing $58.5 million in federal funding.

Vote NO to paying an additional $276 for utilities each year.

September 25, 2013 is referendum day.

The question on the ballot will be:

By voting NO you are in favour of building our sewage treatment plant through a P3 partnership.

That the Council of the City of Regina publicly finance, operate and maintain the new wastewater treatment plant for Regina through a traditional Design, Bid, Build (DBB) approach.

Botswana Hallas gets her Hulk on at the Regina Comic Fair on Sunday at the Hungarian Club. ROSS ROMANIUK/METRO

Sci-fi lovers flock to Comic Fair

Bigger crowd. The event sees around 500 visitors on Sunday

While tens of thousands of Saskatchewan Roughriders fans packed Mosaic Stadium a few kilometres away, Botswana Hallas had her own reason to wear green.

A Hulk mask, in particular, proudly donned on Sunday at the Regina Comic Fair.

The 17-year-old was among hundreds of interesting characters, so to speak, at the comic and science-fiction event held annually at the Hungarian Club.

"Last year, we had almost 300 people. And today, we're really close to 500. It's getting better and better," organizer Erin Partridge said of the growth of the one-day fair for comic fans and vendors of cartoon, superhero and science-fiction collectibles.

"This year, I didn't advertise at all. Just from word of mouth, people phoned and said, 'Can we get a table?'" Partridge, wearing a steam-punk costume, added of the sellers from across Western Canada.

"I love the costumes. That's the most fun part."

Hallas, with friend Anna Shi in tow, was purchasing Spawn movie soundtrack CDs and a Yoda figurine, among other items.

"I was like, 'Dwarf costume or Hulk costume?'" she said of her getup decision. "And I went with Hulk."

Georgia Laloudakis, meanwhile, did her best Catwoman in full costume.

"I love her," Laloudakis said of the character.

"I want to be a nerd. I'm trying! I'm learning!"

Warren Friedrich, of 1999 Collectibles in Regina, appreciated the enthusiasm and fun.

"There's something for everyone, from comics to collectibles to artwork and ceramics," Friedrich explained.

Alleged hazing injures students

Mounties in a small Saskatchewan town say they are investigating allegations of hazing that injured freshman students.

Sgt. James Richardson at the Lanigan RCMP detachment wouldn't say whether charges have been laid, noting the case is under investigation.

But Richardson said the alleged incident occurred early this month and was reported to police by the victims.

He said the students suffered minor injuries.

Richardson would not divulge the nature of the hazing. He said most of the people who are being investigated are under the age of 18. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Votes. Nearly 6,000 come out to cast ballot on wastewater referendum

Voters flocked to the city's four advance poll stations on Saturday to cast their ballots in the referendum over a proposal to construct a wastewater treatment plant using some private financing.

The city confirmed on Sunday that 5,892 residents voted at the advance poll sites, which included Normanview Mall and Victoria Square Mall.

Of the four advance locations, initial figures show that Golden Mile Shopping Centre in the city's south end attracted the highest number of voters, with 2,048 casting ballots there on Saturday.

Northgate Mall, in the north end of the city, drew the fewest number of voters with 1,031.

Normanview had 1,182 advance voters, while Victoria Square saw 1,631.

In the 2012 municipal election, only three of the city's 10 wards saw more than 5,892 voters cast ballots

"This was more than the advance polls in 2012, which ran four locations for three days each," a city spokeswoman told Metro by email, referring to the advance referendum numbers.

The referendum on the financing and operations model for the planned $224-million sewage treatment plant — to decide whether the facility is constructed through a public-private partnership or taken on by city hall alone — is scheduled for Wednesday.

Canada offers support to Kenya

Mall attack. Baird speaks to counterpart after Canadian diplomat, businessman killed

Canada offered its support to Kenya Sunday, saying it was "prepared to do more" to help the east African country recover from a horrific terrorist attack that killed at least 68 people, including two Canadians.

Media reports and Facebook users identified Vancouver businessman Naguib Damji as one of the two Canadians caught in the crossfire as gunmen used AK-47s and threw grenades at Nairobi's upscale Westgate mall, a venue frequented by expatriates and wealthy locals.

Officials have confirmed that the other victim was diplomat Annemarie Desloges, who worked at the Canadian embassy in Nairobi.

The attack that began Saturday dragged into Sunday, with 10 to 15 terrorists holed up inside the building with a number of hostages as Kenyan authorities mounted what it called a final operation to end the siege.

Somalia's radical rebel group, al-Shabab, claims responsibility for the attack as retribution for the presence of Kenyan troops in Somalia. It said there will be no negotiations.

Recent attacks in Kenya

- October 2011-March 2013. Al-Shabab staged several attacks that killed more than 60 people in retaliation to the Kenyan government's decision in October 2011 to send troops into Somalia to battle the rebels.
- July 11, 2010. Militants from al-Shabab detonated near-simultaneous blasts in Uganda's capital at sites where crowds were watching the World Cup soccer final on large TV screens, killing about 76 people.
- Nov. 28, 2002. Militants bombed an Israeli-owned luxury hotel near Mombasa, killing 13 people.

Rescue mission. 'Most' of remaining hostages saved: Kenyan officials

Kenyan's military said late Sunday it had rescued "most" of the remaining hostages held by al-Qaida-linked militants in an upscale Nairobi mall after launching a major operation to end a two-day standoff that had already killed 68 people.

The assault, which began shortly before sundown, came as two helicopters circled the mall, with one skimming very close to the roof.

Kenyan police said on Twitter that a "MAJOR" assault to end the bloody siege had started.

The University of Regina's skyline is changing. This spring we began construction on a new 605-bed residence that will be filled with students in time for the start of the 2015 fall semester. The project will also see the completion of a 90-space daycare and 150-stall underground parkade. This is great news for our campus.

The University of Regina needs more residence spaces to accommodate a growing number of domestic and international students, particularly those who come from outside of the Regina area. Studies demonstrate that students who live on campus are more engaged in campus activities and are more likely to continue on in their programs, so residence expansion is critical to increasing our student retention and program completion rates.

In addition, the residence, daycare and parkade will enhance the University in the years to come, and contribute to the larger community by freeing up other rental accommodations and day care spaces in our growing city and province.

Court battle. Public to see Omar Khadr for first time since capture 11 years ago

Former Guantanamo Bay inmate Omar Khadr is expected to make his first appearance in public since American soldiers captured him as a badly wounded 15-year-old in Afghanistan 11 years ago.

Khadr will be in an Edmonton courtroom Monday for an application to have his ongoing detention in an adult prison declared illegal.

"I want them to see Omar Khadr," his lawyer Dennis Edney said in an interview. "I don't want him hidden away."

Khadr's last court appearance was when he pleaded guilty to five war crimes in October 2010 before a U.S. military commission in Guantanamo Bay, where a few select people were allowed to watch the proceedings in person.

For his guilty plea, he was given an eight-year sentence.

The federal government, which opposes the application, argues Khadr has been appropriately placed in an adult maximum-security facility. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Military mad that it could not quietly court-martial spy

The Canadian military was privately furious the Harper government did not allow it to court-martial a naval intelligence officer who sold top-secret information to the Russians, as seen in a newly declassified military assessment of the scandal.

The rules for courts martial give the military wide latitude on what evidence is kept secret. Through the court process, the public learned of lapses in security clearance and that top-secret defence computers were not as secure as the military believed. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pakistan. Taliban say bombing, which killed 78, is meant to scare off U.S. drone strikes

A pair of suicide bombers blew themselves up amid hundreds of worshippers at a historic church in northwestern Pakistan on Sunday, killing 78 people in the deadliest-ever attack against the country's Christian minority.

A wing of the Pakistani Taliban claimed responsibility, raising new questions about the government's push to strike a peace deal with the militants to end a decade-long insurgency that has killed thousands of people.

The Jundullah arm of the Taliban said they would continue to target non-Muslims until the United States stopped drone attacks in Pakistan's remote tribal region. The latest drone strike came Sunday, when missiles hit a pair of compounds in the North Waziristan tribal area, killing six suspected militants.

The attack on the All Saints Church, which wounded 141 people, occurred as worshippers were leaving after service to get a free meal on the front lawn, said a top government administrator, Sahibzada Anees.

"There were blasts and there was hell for all of us," said Nazir John, who was at the church along with at least 400 other worshippers.

The white walls of the church, which first opened in the late 1800s, were pockmarked with holes. Blood stained the floor and the walls.

The number of casualties was so high that the hospital ran short of caskets for the dead and beds for the wounded, said Mian Iftikhar Hussain, a former provincial information minister who was on the scene. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Weekend carnage caps a violent summer in Iraq

Wave of attacks.
Suicide bombers strike two Baghdad funerals in two days, killing dozens

A suicide bomber detonated his explosive belt among Sunni mourners attending a funeral in Baghdad on Sunday, killing 16 people and wounding 35 others, officials said, in the latest episode of the country's near-daily violence.

Police officials said the evening attack took place when a suicide bomber detonated his explosive belt inside a tent where the funeral was being held in Baghdad's southern neighbourhood of Dora.

Two other attacks in the country's north left two policemen dead and 37 others wounded, the officials added.

Sunday's bloodshed came a day after a wave of attacks killed 104 people, most at a double suicide attack on a Shiite funeral in Baghdad.

Violence has spiked in Iraq during the past few months. More than 4,000 people have been killed between April and August, a level of carnage not seen since the country was on the brink of civil war in 2006-08.

Earlier on Sunday, a suicide bomber rammed an explosives-laden car into a residential area in the city of Kirkuk, wounding 35 people, Kirkuk police Brig. Gen. Anwar Mohammed Qadir said.

The bomber targeted both a Kurdish educational office and an adjacent house for a Christian lawmaker, Qadir said. Seven members of the lawmaker's family were wounded in the attack.

Kirkuk is home to an ethnic mix of Arabs, Kurds and Turkomen who all have competing claims to the oil-rich area.

Mortar lands in Russian embassy compound

A mortar round landed inside the Russian Embassy compound in Damascus on Sunday, state media said, as Moscow said it was willing to send military observers to secure Syrian efforts to surrender its chemical weapons to international control.

Russia is a leading backer of Syria's President Bashar Assad, and rebels fighting to topple his regime have previously targeted the diplomatic mission in Damascus with rockets and mortars.

In Moscow, the Russian Foreign Ministry confirmed the attack, saying rebels fired mortars that landed on the grounds of their embassy. Three workers were injured in the attack, the ministry said, adding that the injuries were not life-threatening.

Holts gets lucky with Pharrell Williams pop-up collaboration

Retail. Omnipresent producer celebrates 10 years of Billionaire Boys Club clothing line by visiting Toronto store

At 40, the perennially youthful Pharrell Williams could easily be mistaken for a man half his age as he continues to loom large behind the scenes and on the front lines as a sought-after hitmaker.

Williams is heading into fall riding the wave of a successful summer that saw him as a featured player on two ubiquitous hits.

His smooth vocals coloured Robin Thicke's R&B anthem Blurred Lines and Daft Punk's disco-esque Get Lucky. Williams will soon be back in collaborative mode with Miley Cyrus, teaming up with the pop star on her new album Bangerz due out on Oct. 8.

In the meantime, the omnipresent hitmaker is marking a major milestone outside of music: the 10th anniversary of his Billionaire Boys Club clothing line which includes graphic tees, hoodies, board shorts and denim.

In celebration of the anniversary, he made a special appearance at Holt Renfrew's Yorkdale location in Toronto on Saturday where a pop-up shop inspired by Williams was launched by the retailer.

Slated to be open until the end of October, the boutique will feature an assortment of items such as hats, hoodies, tees and jackets from Williams's various clothing lines, which also include Bee Line, Billionaire Girls Club and BBC Black.

The Canadian retailer will also feature BBC X Holt Renfrew, a special collaboration of exclusive sweaters and T-shirts for both men and women with prices starting at $68.

Visitors to the shop will get to see some of Williams's prized personal possessions including a N.E.R.D action figure, Louis Vuitton sunglasses and a custom Swarovski hoodie. But he turned coy when asked about the symbolism behind the pieces included: "It'd be cooler not to describe them. I mean, I still want that element of, like, surprise."

Don't drop that new iPhone

As Apple pitches its newest smartphones, users may find something lacking compared with last year's model: They could break more easily.

SquareTrade, a provider of protection plans for gadgets, tested five smartphones, including Apple's new iPhones 5S and 5C, to see if they could withstand drops, dunks and other common hazards. Its finding: The latest models aren't as durable as last year's iPhone 5.

The biggest loser, however, was Samsung's Galaxy S4, which failed to work after being submerged in water and being dropped five feet off the ground, according to SquareTrade.

The phone that withstood SquareTrade's torture test best was Google Inc.'s Moto X. The Moto X is the first phone designed with the Internet company as Motorola's new owner. Released in August, the Moto X is also the first smartphone assembled in the U.S.

"We were expecting that at least one of the new iPhone models would up its game, but surprisingly, it was the Moto X that proved most forgiving of accidents," said Ty Shay, chief marketing officer at SquareTrade. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

$4M HOME NOT A TRIUMPH

URBAN COMPASS

Paul Sullivan
regina@metronews.ca

It was bound to happen.

The Regina real-estate market has coughed up its first $4-million house. Well, the two-storey split level at 6062 Wascana Court is listed at $3,999,999, which sounds so much cheaper.

Whatever, this beauty has earned the distinction of breaking the record for Regina's most expensive real-estate listing.

Welcome to the big time, baby.

The local real-estate community is bursting with pride. You think they'd given birth (It's a Monster House! Cigars all around!). The listing agent told a reporter that Regina is catching up to other major cities in Canada. Not only that, there are so many listings above $2 million these days that it's more common than not.

It might just be me, but this rush to cash in on the real-estate gold rush does not generate a peaceful, easy feeling.

For one thing, it's the sort of thing they do in Vancouver, not down-to-Earth Regina. In Vancouver, real estate speculation rivals coffee snobbery as a local obsession. The only problem is that people who live there can't afford to live there. So they have to move to Abbotsford.

Just to keep that in perspective, Abbotsford is about the same distance to downtown Vancouver as Moose Jaw is to downtown Regina. A nice little two-hour commute on a rainy Monday morning.

I think, therefore, we should also be careful what we wish for. To "catch up" to Vancouver, Regina has a far way to go. The most expensive home currently on the market in Metro Vancouver is a giant old pile in old-money Shaughnessy for $35 million. It's generally considered a tear-down. And as for that $4-million landmark, 78 homes over $4 million sold in the first half of 2013 (five per cent of them over asking!). Altogether, there were a total of 1,239 sales over $1 million in the first six months of the year. Vancouver, according to U.S. think tank Demographia, is the second least affordable housing market in the world, just below Hong Kong.

I don't bring these numbers up to burst real-estate agents' euphoric bubble. Or maybe I do. This is what "catching up" means.

If a house built 11 years ago in what is essentially an upscale subdivision goes for $4 million, it raises everybody's boats. And it becomes increasingly difficult for families treading water to buy a house anywhere east of Moose Jaw.

Of course, there's also the obvious question. Who, in this age of 1.2 children, needs 6,000 square feet, six bedrooms, four bathrooms and a three-car driveway? Oh, and a wine cellar. Can't live without one of those.

This puppy's carbon footprint is bigger than that of several African villages.

But what the heck. If you've got the money and don't care about the environment, we've got a bridge, er, house you might want to look at.

But you better hurry, because at this price, it's going fast.

The weather has taken a turn toward the cooler days of fall, so it's nearly time to put away the outdoor grill and start making heartier meals in the kitchen. If your skills have rusted a bit over the summer — or you're a complete noob — here's a few online destinations to help you get up to speed.

Feast:

As soon as you hit the home page, you're asked to enter your email address. If you're a beginner, sign up for the week-long Crash Course of easy lessons with a healthy side of humour emailed directly to you. Already capable of some entry-level kitchen wizardry? Take a shot at making kimchi in fermentation class or locking down the best way to gather some orange zest. (letsfeast.com)

America's Test Kitchen:

If you're ready to try your hand at some more complicated fare, the large catalogue of recipes, lessons and instructional videos available here are a domestic treasure trove. There's good stuff here for beginners too. But it wouldn't be the best use of your membership dollars. (onlinecookingschool.com)

Culination:

OK, so this isn't an operating site. However, it is a very intriguing Indiegogo crowdfunding effort aimed at creating what it calls the "largest library of cooking lessons in the world," all accessible by a custom-built interactive platform. The perks for funders are an easy win if it reaches its potential. (indiegogo.com/projects/culination)

RE: Campaign To Halt Peru Cat-Eating Festival, published Sept. 20

All in the name of religion, what does that say? Sad that they hid behind the rituals from a time when food was not available. We find this unpleasant because we have cats for pets. I am sure these people do not care what we think and will continue doing what has been brainwashed in their head under the banner of religion. Tiggerthe cat posted to metronews.ca

This falls under m.y.o.b., why should I impose my morality and ethics on these people for a totally ethnocentric behaviour? It makes about as much sense as them making us eat cats. Peter Justice posted to metronews.ca

Who: Ellie Goulding

Where: iTunes Festival

When: Sunday, Sept. 22

If there's a downside to having a voice as layered and multi-faceted as Ellie Goulding's, one that quickly takes different turns and is seemingly on multiple paths at the same, it's the ever-present danger of it going off the rails.

But danger, of course, adds an element of excitement. In Sunday's performance, the U.K. electro-pop singer didn't fail to thrill, adding surprise at every bend while maintaining control of her most-unusual instrument.

Her emotive delivery on Joy, off her latest album Halcyon, was shiver-inducing, full of the sorrow one might expect from a song about the realization of a failed relationship, but then Goulding does an about-turn, giving strength to the line "watch me fall apart" that defies the fragile-bird heard just a moment earlier. On her forlorn cover of Elton John's Your Song, her eyes shine with tears and her voice has what seems like just a hint of sarcasm during the chorus.

Halfway through her performance, Goulding picks herself up off the floor, figuratively speaking. By the time she gets to Anything Can Happen, the sweaty singer is busting out moves that look like they were cribbed from a hop-scotch court, sounding like a high-pitched Stevie Nicks with bleating operatic flourishes, and infusing the crowd with the confidence of the track.

Things did get a bit messy at times, like during Under the Sheets, but overall Goulding proved herself, once again, to be one of the most interesting voices in pop music today.

2013 Emmy Awards. Early surprises as best supporting actress Merritt Wever delivers 'best speech ever'

Julia Louis-Dreyfus claimed her second consecutive best comedy actress Emmy Award on Sunday for her role as an ambitious political second banana in Veep, with Jim Parsons claiming the top comedy acting trophy for The Big Bang Theory.

"This is so much good fortune it's almost too much to bear," said Louis-Dreyfus. "I'm very grateful to have the opportunity to make people laugh. It's a joyful way to make a living."

Parsons added to the awards he won in 2011 and 2010 for the role of a science nerd.

"My heart, oh my heart. I want you to know I'm very aware of how exceedingly fortunate I am," he said.

Merritt Wever of Nurse Jackie won the night's first award for best supporting actress in a comedy series, kicking off the ceremony on a surprising note and with a remarkably brief acceptance speech.

"Thank you so much. Thank you so much. Um, I got to go, bye," Wever told the audience after besting a field that included two-time winner Julie Bowen of Modern Family.

"Merritt Wever, best speech ever," host Neil Patrick Harris said.

Backstage, she offered an explanation: "I'm sorry I didn't thank anyone. I was going to cry."

Tony Hale of Veep claimed the trophy for best supporting actor in a comedy, a category that has been the property in recent years of the men of Modern Family.

"Oh, man. ... This is mindblowing; mindblowing," Hale said.

Robin Williams offered the first of five memorial tributes that were added to the traditional "in memoriam" group tribute.

"Jonathan Winters was my mentor," Williams said of the actor-comedian. "I told him that and he said, 'Please, I prefer idol.'"

On the red carpet, there were plenty of slit skirts, romantic lace overlays, graphic black-and-white combinations, strategic skin-baring slashes and tough-girl harnesses.

Claire Danes of Homeland wore a champagne-coloured beaded gown and Robin Wright of House of Cards was in a black silk-cady gown.

Other early winners included Tina Fey and Tracey Wigfield, who won for best writing for a comedy series for 30 Rock. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

As if an official publicist confirmation of the split and photos of Liam Hemsworth kissing another woman weren't enough, photographers caught a sure sign that his relationship with Miley Cyrus is over on Friday as a moving truck was spotted outside Cyrus' Los Angeles home collecting the rest of Hemsworth's belongings, according to TMZ. Hemsworth is now back in Atlanta continuing work on the Hunger Games finale Mockingjay. Cyrus, sources say, initiated the split. Avoid toddler plane hell

IT'S ALL RELATIVE
Kathy Buckworth
Kathybuckworth.com

Forget the horror of Snakes on a Plane. If you're a parent, you know that the Terror of Toddlers on a long flight can be even scarier.

It starts with the looks you get from other passengers as you guide your careening youngster down the aisle, and they all cross their fingers, hoping you will not be their seatmate.

Maureen Dennis, founder of weewelcome.ca has been that mom — with four young kids — and shares expert advice after having covered many miles with many toddlers.

"When travelling with toddlers, never plan on them sleeping on the flight. You can hope and pray that they might but there is a very good chance you will be their sole entertainment for the whole flight, which is a challenge in a confined space," she says.

What works best? "Pack a tablet with a movie on it, crayons, playdough, small toys, books, stickers and drinks and snacks for a small village," advises Dennis.

Should you let them stretch their little legs? Dennis doesn't think so. "Leave the walking up and down the aisles for emergencies as toddlers don't understand the seat belt sign and you may end up with a meltdown on your hands trying to get them back in their seat."

Public shaming: the new time out?

Discipline. Putting your kid's bad behaviour on display for the world creates headlines, but disciplinary approach misses mark: experts

When it comes to curbing persistently bad behaviour exhibited by children, is shaming the new name of the game in parental discipline?

Scott Mackintosh recently offered a very public — and buzz worthy — lesson in modesty to his teen daughter, whom he felt was continually dressing inappropriately, by turning the spotlight on himself. The Utah father donned a pair of short-shorts and a "Best Dad Ever" T-shirt for a family night out, resulting in embarrassment for his daughter, pointing and strange looks from observers and the image of Mackintosh in the getup going viral.

Meanwhile, other recent headlines have shown parents putting the misdeeds of their kids — and subsequent punishments — on public display.

Earlier this month, a California mom punished her daughter for defying orders not to "twerk" at a school dance by making the 11-year-old stand at a busy intersection holding a sign informing onlookers of her actions involving the suggestive dance move.

Brandie Weikle, editor-in-chief of Canadian Family magazine, said in observing the parental shaming trend in social media, she has found it interesting to see how polarizing the comments are in response to the actions. "There's plenty of people that think: 'Way to go. That's a parent taking a risk or being firm' and they're in favour of it. I guess I'm personally a little wary of that approach," said Weikle, mother of two sons, aged six and 10.

"I would prefer more of a logical consequence, and I'm not certain that embarrassment is necessarily what logically follows from the supposed crime. I'm a bit more in favour of connecting what's gone on to, for instance, a loss of privilege or natural consequence that has unfolded from what the child has done wrong."

Psychotherapist and parenting educator Andrea Nair said when parents use shaming as a disciplinary tool, they may get their children to obey, but likely won't get kids to co-operate — and it could harm their relationship in the process.

"Ridiculing and shaming hurts," said Nair, co-founder of The Core Family Health Centre based in London, Ont.

"If a parent realizes they have hurt their child on purpose (they can go) back and then (do) relationship repair and they think of a plan (and say): 'I was really frustrated. Your behaviour is not appropriate, and I'm trying to find ways to make it stop, so can you help me out here? Let's find a way for this behaviour to change, but without us both needing to be mean to each other.'"

Nair said the more calm and reasonable adults are, the more they'll teach their kids to follow suit. And if they're meeting resistance, she said parents can adopt what she described as the either-or approach.

"You can say: 'Are you going to be able to get off this video game, or am I turning off the Wi-Fi and unplugging the computer. Which is your pick?'" said Nair. THE CANADIAN PRESS

What is discipline?

"...disciplining, at any age, is about correcting and guiding (your child) toward appropriate behaviour."

Fall fusion: Spicy gingerbread meets sweet banana loaf

Ingredients

- 1 cup buttermilk
- 2 eggs
- 1/2 cup vegetable or canola oil
- 6 very ripe bananas, mashed
- 1 cup packed brown sugar
- 1/4 cup honey
- 1/4 cup molasses
- 2 cups bran
- 3 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 tbsp plus 1 tsp baking powder
- 1 tsp salt
- 1 tsp baking soda
- 1 tsp cinnamon
- 1 tbsp ground dry ginger
- 1/2 tsp nutmeg
- 1 tsp ground cloves
- 1 cup finely chopped bitter sweet chocolate
- 3/4 cup finely chopped candied ginger

1. Heat the oven to 325 F. Spray a Bundt pan with baking spray.

This recipe serves 16. MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

2. In a medium bowl, whisk together the buttermilk, eggs, oil, bananas, brown sugar, honey, molasses and bran. Let sit for 10 minutes.

3. Meanwhile, in another medium bowl, whisk together the flour, baking powder, salt, baking soda, cinnamon, ginger, nutmeg and cloves.

4. Once the banana-bran mixture has sat for 10 minutes, add the flour mixture to it and gently stir just until the dry ingredients are moistened. Gently fold in the chopped chocolate and chopped ginger. Spoon the mixture into the prepared pan and bake for 50 to 60 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted at the centre comes out clean.

5. Let cool for 15 minutes in the pan before turning out onto a wire rack to cool completely. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

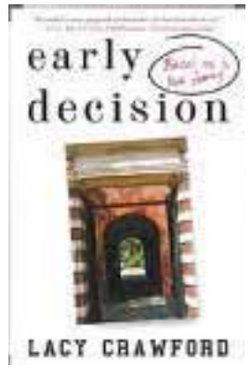
Decision time. Book on college acceptance race was inspired by author's own experiences: she signed her baby up for preschool too late



As a post-secondary school counsellor, Lacy Crawford thought she understood how students and their parents were driven crazy by the application process — until she had a baby. Crawford says that as soon as she was "late" to sign her four-month-old son up for preschool, she truly felt what it was like to walk in the shoes of the parents she'd been advising. That experience became her novel, Early Decision, which follows a top-tier counsellor and her students through the head-spinning frenzy of applications. We asked Crawford about walking the line between fiction and memoir for her debut novel.

How did you find the characters in the book?
All of the stories in Early Decision are based on things that happened. There were interactions between parents and students that really troubled me, that I couldn't get out of my memory and I wanted to try to understand them. I also wanted to write them in a fun way — it's a satire. It's accessible, and it's meant to let parents and students see what this process is doing to us.

So what do you feel the process is doing to us?
I think (the application process) puts the emphasis on getting in rather than growing up. So, I had the characters begin with their essays (the book features college essays from Crawford's fictional students) and I wrote their essays and then I figured out who their parents were and went from there.

It sounds like you're a little bit skeptical about the application process. Is that true?
I'm not an education expert — my experience is only anecdotal, but I think the process privileges the very privileged, the rich kids who attend private schools all the way through, or public schools in towns that have the really good schools. Those are the kids who know what they're competing for and how to compete for it. At the other end of the spectrum, there are underserved young people who, when they can perform, the top colleges are desperate for them. If you are an ethnic minority coming out of a top (or a terrible) public high school and you have great scores, ivy leagues will fight each other for you. In the middle are hundreds of thousands of kids, maybe millions — lots and lots of kids who are good, bright kids, coming out of middling high schools (that) haven't given them the resources they need to know what colleges are out there. And their parents are maybe working full time and maybe not obsessed with Yale, so they don't have the time and the resources to figure out how to give their kids all the boosts that the rich kids are getting.

What are your feelings about your own kids and college?
My fantasy for my boys is actually a fantasy for myself. I hope that by the time they are 17, I am so confident of their character and so sure that they know their own hearts that I will be able to support whatever decisions they make.

Joseph Fauria of the Lions celebrates after scoring a touchdown against the Redskins on Sunday in Landover, Md. PATRICK MCDERMOTT/GETTY IMAGES

Lions make their point in the capital. Behind a couple of lucky breaks, Detroit ends 74 years of road futility against Redskins

Robert Griffin III went head-first instead of sliding, so when the ball popped out it was a fumble.

Aldrick Robinson had a touchdown catch in his hands, but he couldn't quite maintain possession as he hit the ground in the end zone.

Thanks to the turf, the Detroit Lions have ended 74 years of road failure against the Washington Redskins.

Detroit beat Washington 27-20 Sunday with big days from Matthew Stafford, Calvin Johnson and Nate Burleson and those two fourth-quarter Redskins bobbles, the kinds of breaks that had eluded Detroit (2-1) in the U.S. capital since Franklin Delano Roosevelt lived on Pennsylvania Avenue.

"You never know how the cookie's going to crumble, and it feels good that it crumbled our way this time," Detroit cornerback Rashen Mathis said.

"I wasn't a part of the past, but I am part of the future, so it feels good to give the fans something to feel good about, and we can demolish a record, our streak, that was going on for years and years and years."

The Lions last beat the Redskins away from home in 1939, a 21-game streak that comes to a halt as the second-longest in NFL history.

Detroit's last road victory in the series came in 1935 against the Boston Redskins, two years before the move to Washington (0-3).

History was at play in other ways. The "Calvin Johnson rule" — in which a receiver must maintain possession of the ball all the way to the ground when falling during a catch — worked in favour of the Lions for a change.

This time it was Robinson who wasn't quite able to keep the ball from coming loose after hauling in a pass from Griffin for an apparent 57-yard touchdown. The score would have given the Redskins the lead with 9:05 to play, but it was overturned by replay.

Then there was Griffin, who scrambled for a 21-yard run deep into the opponent's territory with the score tied in the fourth quarter.

But the ball jarred loose as Griffin stumbled forward to give himself up at the 30-yard line. The play would have been ruled dead if he had slid.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You may feel that you are destined for bigger and better things and you may be right but it won't happen as if by magic. Determine your number one priority today – then go for it to the exclusion of everything else.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
If you wish for something hard enough today there is every chance that your wish will come true. The planets indicate this is your time of year and extraordinary things can happen – so wish away.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Don't let what other people are doing distract you from what you should be doing. Yes, it may seem that they are having more fun but in the long-term what's more important to you, having fun or making money?

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
You may be eager to show what you can do but try waiting until later in the week before pushing yourself to the front of the stage.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
The best way to change the world is to change your own attitude. It's not really the world "out there" that is the problem but the world you create inside your own head.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You may be upset that something did not work out the way you wanted it to but over the next few days you will realize it was for the best. New opportunities will arise.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
In some way or other you are still trying to hold back the tide, even though you know it cannot be done. The time has come to accept that you must move with the times, because the times won't move with you. SALLY BROMPTON
